The market environment is changing at great speed, and this is particularly true of the construction market, so exposed to winds coming from every possible direction: economy, public policies, business performance, household sentiment. . . It is fundamental to keep track of those changes, and Euroconstruct provides a good vantage point to see where the construction sector is heading. For anybody in the construction business with the responsibility to take strategic decisions, the winter Euroconstruct conference will be a unique opportunity to network and exchange views in Barcelona, one of the world's most popular travel destinations.
